

Director's Letter

For Red Jacket Community Library, I would say that 2009 was the year to really begin to assert some independence. Although this library may never be fully independent of the school, nor may the residents of the school district wish it to be, there have always been certain limitations which have come along side of the very obvious benefits of the shared facility.

Adults and teens enjoy a program about a fellow community member's hike along the Appalachian Trail.

Some of these limitations include lack of daytime hours during the school year, space limitations, restrictions on room usage, and until recently, the inability to join the OWWL library system and let our patrons share the privileges the other public libraries share.

Last Fall and Spring, I gathered together a varied group of 12 community members to help plan the library's new goals for the next five years. From these meetings I came to understand more about what people want from this library. Since then I have watched the numbers of people at our programs soar and the number of teens that choose to hang out here has more than tripled.

Alfred St. John's Trinidad & Tobago Steelband performed at the Library for a Mardi Gras party.

After all, you and I want the very best Red Jacket Community Library that there can be.
